

P13538

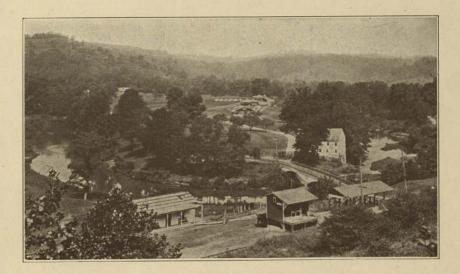

West Virginia 4-H Camp Jackson Mills

Birds Eye View of the Camp

The W. Va. Four-H camp is located on the West Fork of the Monongahela River, four miles north of Weston, W. Va.

It is the boyhood home of General Stonewall Jackson and is the place where he received his early training which made him a great man who stood like a stone wall.

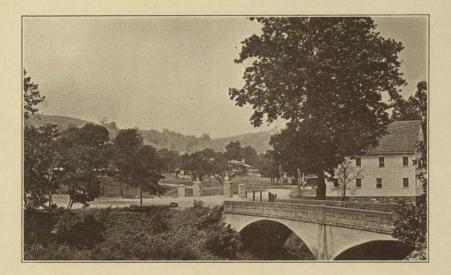

Today thousands of boys and girls are getting their start on this very site.

The Entrance and The Old Mill

There were at the time of Stonewall's boyhood two mills at this point, a saw mill and a grist mill. The old grist mill has had a new foundation, a new roof and completely covered with new weatherboarding which will make it stand for another hundred years.

Stonewall's early friendships were made here and today the friendships are an outstanding feature of the camp work.

The Lewis County Cottage

Built through the efforts of the County farm bureau, who made a loan to the boys and girls of the county. The indebtedness was paid off in three years.

The Upshur County Cottage

A stone cottage as solid as the Four-H ideas themselves. A marble tablet in the chimney shows the communities that gave to the cottage, they are 100 per cent represented.

The Marion County Lodge

The material donated by the civic clubs of the county and the labor paid by the county court. Rotary club the floors. Kiwanis club the roof. Federated womens clubs the chimney. Business and professional womens club the beds.

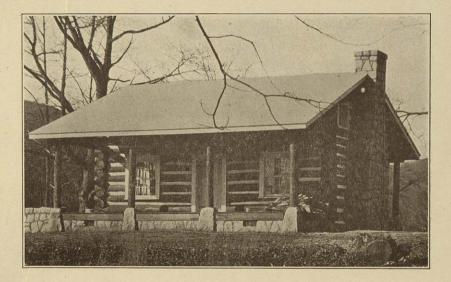

The Harrison County Cottage

This is the largest county building on the grounds and was built by the county court and the 4-H boys and girls. It is located half way between the assembly hall and the dining hall.

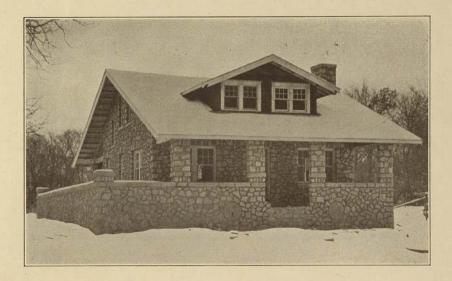

The Webster County Log Cabin

This cabin is representative of the pioneer spirit of this county. It was built partly through donations and through a popularity contest in which 1,100 dollars were raised, each vote costing one cent.

The Gilmer County Cottage

Built by the cooperation of the school teachers and the Four-H clubs of the county. It is a fine cottage in every respect.

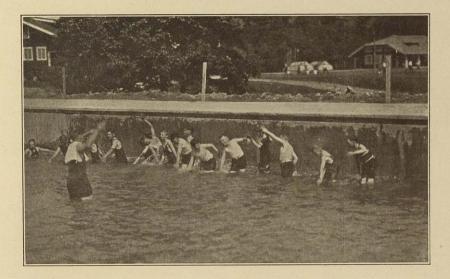

Mount Vernon Dining Hall

Built as a West Virginia Memorial to the father of our country. The building will hold about 500 campers at a meal.

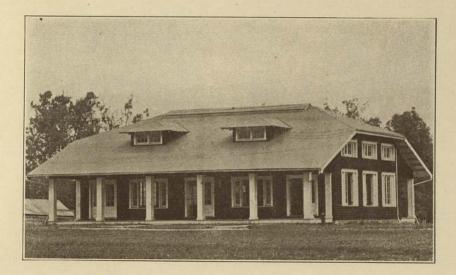

The "Old Swimmin' Hole"

The architect who designed the pool said it would cost $20,000, but the donations of various friends reduced the cost to about one-fourth that amount.

The Assembly Hall

Built at state expense and is large enough to seat over 400 people. The boys and girls agreed to do the rest if the state would buy the ground and put up the necessary buildings.

The Work Shops

They were built as work shops by the Four-H boys but the state now has replaced them with larger and better equipped ones.

