

10 NEW TEACHERS JOIN MARSHALL'S SUMMER FACULTY

College Prepares to Take Care of Largest Number of Students in Its History

ENROLLMENT ON INCREASE

Henry F. Becker, Formerly of Eastern Illinois, Takes Miss Burgess' Place

Ten new teachers of the Marshall college summer school beginning in June, have been scheduled, according to President Morris P. Shawkey. Each teacher is a specialist in his particular field.

For two or three years past Marshall college summer school has had the distinction of being the largest in the state, each successive year showing an increase, in enrollment. Last year 1074 students, crowded the various classes of the summer session, and plans are being made to take care of a still larger group this year.

For the department of geography to take the place of Miss Frances Burgess, who goes to Columbia for graduate study, the college has secured Henry F. Becker, formerly of the Eastern Illinois teachers college. Professor Becker is just now completing his master's degree work under Dr. Paul Goode, of the University of Chicago, a leading authority in the field of modern geography.

The summer school is especially fortunate in being able to book Miss Florence M. Hale, rural school agent of Maine, and nationally known leader in rural education work, said J. B. Shouse, director of the summer school, Miss Hale comes particularly for the new rural school department work.

The college feels also that it has a valuable addition to its force in the person of Mrs. Florence Jackson Parker, who has her master's degree from Columbia and has done considerable work toward doctorate, Professor Shouse said. Mrs. Parker is at present engaged in writing a book on rural sociology.

For domestic art Miss Theeta Carrington Searcy has been secured. Miss Searcy was an honor student. She has her bachelor's and master's degrees. She is now teaching in Stephens College, Columbia, Mo.

In place of Professor E. E. Myers, who takes the summer off to travel and paint some pictures for which he has been commissioned, Miss Belle C. Scofield, supervisor of art in the grades of the Indianapolis schools has been selected. The art work of the Indianapolis schools is known the nation over, and Marshall feels that the coming of Miss Scofield who has been largely responsible for the reputation of her city means a big boost for the art work here.

John D. Muldoon, supervisor of rural schools of West Virginia, is booked for intensive work in the rural department. Mr. Muldoon is eminently qualified by education and experience to render a notable service in his field.

Another man who has won his place by personal merit is Professor A. E. Stoddard of the Huntington High School, who will teach classes in school hygiene, Prof. Shouse explained.

Miss Olla Stevenson goes to Europe for the summer and to do the French work in her absence Miss Josephine Tucker, now teaching in the exclusive Erskine School of Boston, has been secured.

As an assistant in education Miss Bertha M. Rogers, B. A., M. A., of Janesville, Wisconsin, has been secured.

Also Professor Selvage, in Psychology, and Professor Bowers, in English will meet the summer school classes for the first time. Two or three more instructors are to be selected before the opening of the session. Every one is looking forward to an unusually fine summer school session.—The Huntington Advertiser.
